

WORKFORCE EDUCATION & TRAINING

Our workforce education and training programs are designed to meet the special needs of new or expanding businesses. Training can be of an industrial, technical, service or non-technical nature and can employ our ready team of local and regional workforce development partners. Our goal is to deliver customized employee training/re-training programs and continuing education programs to equip your workforce with what they need to make you successful.

Training Partnerships

Our local training entities, Central Ohio Technical College, along with its Workforce Innovation Center, partnering with the Ohio State University, Muskingum University, Business and Industry Institute and Hocking Technical College, along with Coshocton County Job & Family Services and the Coshocton County Career Center have successfully partnered to deliver customized local training solutions that meet local business and industry's individualized needs. If we don't have local instructors available, we have successfully partnered with other regional training centers, technical schools and colleges to create flexible, timely training solutions.

These local and regional workforce education partnerships are coordinated through our county's RTEA (Regional Training and Education Alliance), whose members represent the above mentioned entities. RTEA stays abreast of trends and advances in our local and regional partners' training capabilities.

Are you a new business or business relocating from outside Coshocton? If so, RTEA can facilitate the development of Co-Sponsorship training agreements, sharing cost-centers and profits, and can serve as the single point of contact for defining, coordinating and delivering training and re-training programs that meet your employees' needs.

To discuss your businesses unique training requirements, call the Coshocton Port Authority at 740-622-7005.
